Award for superior achievement in culture, governance, training and communications, monitoring and auditing, risk assessment, social and environmental responsibility and leadership endeavors.

We believe being named a World's Most Ethical Company reflects that we understand the importance of a strong ethical culture, and work to obtain that through senior leadership support, management involvement and formalized programs focused on achieving ethical business behaviors. "This recognition honors the work our employees do every day to operate with integrity in all areas of our business," says HCSC President and CEO Paula Steiner.

We were also recognized by others in 2017 for our efforts, receiving two best practice awards from Health Ethics Trust— one for our Code of Ethics and Conduct and one for our Speak Up campaign. And HCSC's compliance program was rated "outstanding to best practice" in the assessment of our overall program.

The reviewers commented on the nomination that they "have yet to review a program as consistently outstanding as the HCSC Compliance Program."

This positive evaluation gives credit to the work the ethics and compliance department and the government programs compliance departments do above and beyond the minimum requirements to set ethical business standards.
